The CALC is one of Australia's leading consumer organisations, undertaking research, policy development, advocacy and education. The CALC also operates a consumer legal practice assisting thousands of low-income and vulnerable consumers each year with free legal advice and representation. This training session is conducted as part of the CALC's Outreach Project, through which we provide professional training to community workers and lawyers to advocate on behalf of consumers. We thank the South West Community Legal Service for their support of this training session.

*Lawyers, please note that this training session is worth one CPD point.
